PLANS FOR INDIANA BUILDING.

World's Fair Commission Meets To-Morrow to Examine Them

The Indiana world's fair commission will meet to-morrow at the headquarters in the Statehouse to hear the report of the building committee on the plans submitted by the various architects who aspire to the honor of designing and building the edifice that will represent this State at the St. Louis exposition. The committee has all the plans, and it is understood has determined on one set, which it will recommend to the commission.

The commission may not reach a final decision in the matter at this meeting, but | way. all the members are exceedingly anxious that there be no unnecessary delays. They realize the value of time saved at the being of their work, and hope to have he work on the building practically completed before next winter. If it is delayed intil the last few months before the opening of the fair unexpected difficulties and obstacles may arise which would seriously erfere with or mar the showing which adiana is expected to make. An expenditure of $45,000 is contemplated in the build-

INDIANA ASSOCIATION HOLDS SES-SION AT THE DENISON HOTEL.

Report of Organizer Moore Shows Rapid Growth Over the State-National Convention Discussed.

The board of directors of the Indiana Retail Merchants' Association held a special meeting at the Denison yesterday afternoon and last night to consider important matters relative to the extension of the organization. The report of the organizer, E. R. Moore, of South Bend, was received and discussed and plans outlined for further efforts along the same line. Those present at the meeting were N. A. Moore and Robert Hellar, Indianapolis;

William H. Legg, Logansport; E. Moore, South Bend; M. E. Clarke, Michigan City; G. Hitzeman, Fort Wayne; Fred Myer, Lafayette, and H. N. Cook, Evansville, who is the president of the association.

'The report of our organizer, Mr. Moore, shows that the association is growing in a most gratifying manner," said President Cook last evening. "We now have local organization in eighty-three cities and towns with a total membership of over 2,600, and believe that we shall have practically the entire State covered within a year. The merchants of Indiana have come to realize the need of organization and they are meeting us more than half

The directors also discussed the coming national and State meetings of the association, but took no definite action in regard to either one. The date of neither convention has been determined as yet, but the national meeting will be held in California probably some time in January. The Indiana association will meet within a few weeks after the national convention, in this city. Indiana will be largely represented at the California meeting. The Indiana Retail Merchants' Association was organized three years ago, but interest in the organization was permitted to lag until the present year when it was determined to make a special effort to increase the number of subordinate organizations and the total membership.

Rev. W. H. Chandler Says That Men Need Convictions, Not Notions.

The fifth annual convention of the Christian Missionary Alliance of this district continued yesterday afternoon and last night at the Gospel Tabernacle, corner of Massachusetts avenue and East street. After to-day the convention will be in sessions at the Tabernacle Presbyterian Church, corner of Eleventh and Meridian.

The sermon yesterday afternoon was delivered by the Rev. W. H. Chandler, of Wheaton, Ill. He said in part: "I am convinced that thus early in the convention we should constitute the gospel as our teacher. Jesus taught as one having authority and privately as well as publicly expounding and explaining the truths to which he gave utterance. People were astonished at his teachings.
